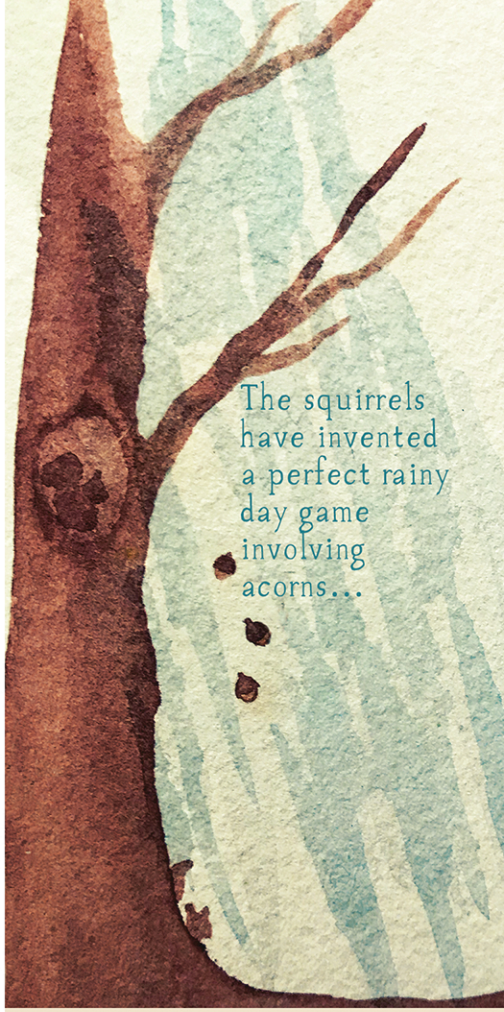
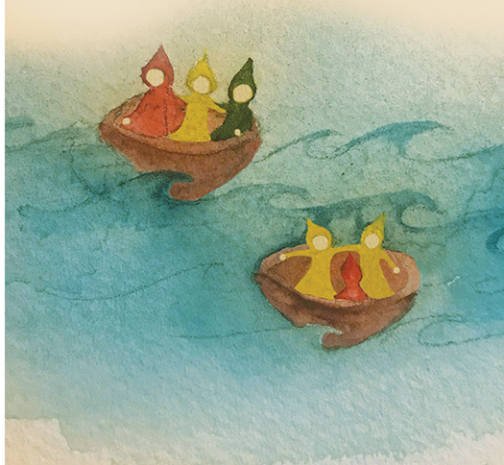
Most of the fairies love the rain, but one fairy does not. She simply detests getting wet. She has been given the task of tending to the basket of _____ which she does while standing under a toadstool...

One of the very important tasks for the spring fairies is to dust each and every one of the flowers in the land. Tirelessly they work tending to each flower just for a moment and blessing it with their magical dust to make sure, along with the bees, of course, that each flower will flourish all the summer long. At the end of each day they all meet back at the...



The squirrels have invented a perfect rainy day game involving acorns...

We play in our dry den as mama gives us each a bath one at a time, licking us and tickling us with her rough tongue as we try not to wiggle and giggle too much.
Suddenly the rain from the outside begins to trickle into the inside. "Quick!" Mama says. "We must get to..."

They cling to the grasses as the rain falls and when the sun comes out and the rainbow shines in the sky they climb up to the top where they have a little party with cakes, tea and...


Their shell boat floats swiftly down the rushing river toward the pond. The hope is that they will get to the island by nightfall where they will celebrate with all the others during the rising of the full moon. Soon, they pass by some mice rowing in their own little boat "Hullo!" they say and then "PLOP!" the mice throw something into their boat. It is a...
