

Anka looks to the sky each morning to see if her friend swallow is coming home yet from far to the south where he's spent the winter. Each spring she waits and waits until one day she sees him far off in the distance. She thinks today could be the day and has baked a seed cake just in case...

