The storyteller dreamt in stories, woke with stories and lived with stories, so her entire day and night were made all of stories. She lives with her cat and all the characters and beings who frequented her imaginings. She never felt alone. Her greatest joy in all the world is to tell stories to children. She has a special stump on which she stands when she tells her stories. She tells of animals, magical creatures, nature, the stars, times long ago, and times that have yet to come, but her favorite thing to tell stories about is...
