

Every evening when she goes to bed it is difficult to get to sleep knowing what is to come. But she always does go to sleep and always wakes when the singing begins. The creak of the floor as she steps out of her bed does not wake Papa, and the creak of the door as she opens and closes it does not wake him either. He remains fast asleep while she goes out and dances the night away with the bear. When she comes back from her dancing she must...
