

In the morning the girl can still see the footprints the bear had left on the ground. Out of the footprints are growing her favorite flower, the snowdrop. As she walks up to look closer she thinks she sees the little snowdrop children out of the corner of her eye...

